

Dalarna University Master's Scholarships 2027 | Sweden

Description

Dalarna University in Sweden offers tuition fee scholarships for eligible international students applying for master's programmes in the 2027 intake. The opportunity may benefit students who want to pursue postgraduate studies in Sweden and reduce their tuition costs. Applicants should check the admission requirements, scholarship criteria, and application deadlines before applying. The university's scholarships provide partial tuition fee reductions, while eligible students may also explore separate Swedish Institute scholarships that offer broader financial support. Applications for the autumn 2027 scholarship cycle are expected to open in January 2027.

Scholarship overview

- Host country: Sweden
- Study level / opportunity type: Master's degree programmes only
- Funding classification: Partially funded – tuition fee reduction; living expenses are not covered by Dalarna University's scholarships.
- Application deadline: 15 February 2027 for the Dalarna University scholarship application for the autumn 2027 intake.
- Current status: Upcoming – applications are expected to open in January 2027.

Scholarship benefits

- Tuition fees: Yes – a 5,000 SEK reduction for eligible students through the Choose Dalarna First Scholarship. Additional academic excellence awards may be available during studies.
- Monthly stipend / living allowance: No – not covered by Dalarna University's own scholarships.
- Travel or airfare: No – not covered by Dalarna University's own scholarships.
- Health insurance: No – not included as a scholarship benefit.
- Accommodation: No – accommodation costs are not covered.
- Visa, books, research or settling-in allowance: No – these are not listed as benefits of Dalarna University's own scholarships.

Important distinction: The separate Swedish Institute (SI) scholarships may cover tuition fees, a monthly living allowance of 12,000 SEK, and a travel grant for eligible applicants. These have separate eligibility criteria and an independent application process.

Eligibility Criteria

The Dalarna University Master's Scholarships 2027 are intended for students applying to eligible master's programmes in Sweden. According to the university's official scholarship information, applicants must meet the following conditions.

- Academic level: Master's degree programmes only. Bachelor's degrees, PhD programmes and standalone courses are not eligible for Dalarna University's scholarships.
- Nationality: The university's own scholarships do not specify a restricted list of nationalities. Applicants must be required to pay tuition fees to qualify.
- Academic qualifications: Applicants must meet the academic entry requirements for their chosen master's programme. These vary by programme and generally require a relevant bachelor's degree.
- Age limit: No specific age limit is stated on the university's scholarship page.

- Work experience: Work experience is not a general requirement for Dalarna University's own scholarships. Separate Swedish Institute scholarships may have work experience and leadership requirements.
- English language requirements: Applicants must satisfy the English language requirements for their chosen programme. Accepted evidence and exemptions depend on the programme and the applicant's previous education.
- Admission requirements: Applicants must apply through the official Swedish admissions system, rank an eligible Dalarna University master's programme as their first choice, submit the scholarship application by the relevant deadline, and receive admission.
- Residency and home-country rules: No separate home-country residency requirement is stated for the university's own scholarship. Additional nationality and residence conditions may apply to Swedish Institute scholarships.
- Nomination route: No nomination is required for the university's own scholarship. Applicants apply directly through the university's scholarship process.

Important: Dalarna University's own scholarship is a tuition-fee reduction, not a fully funded award. The Swedish Institute scholarships are separate opportunities with their own eligibility rules.

Available Fields or Programmes

Dalarna University offers master's programmes in several subject areas. The following programmes are listed on the university's official scholarship page as eligible for the Swedish Institute (SI) scholarships in the 2026 cycle. The eligible programme list for 2027 has not yet been confirmed.

- Business Intelligence
- Business Studies with an International Focus
- Data Science
- Energy Efficient Built Environment
- Global Sexual Reproductive Health

- Solar Energy Engineering

Important: These are confirmed for the referenced SI scholarship cycle, not necessarily the complete list of programmes eligible for Dalarna University's own tuition-fee scholarships in 2027. The university's own scholarships may cover other master's programmes too.

How to Apply for Dalarna University Master's Scholarships 2027

Applicants apply directly to Dalarna University through Sweden's official university admissions system and submit a separate scholarship application. No embassy or nominating agency is required for the university's own scholarship.

Step-by-step application process

1. Choose a master's programme: Visit the official Dalarna University website and select a programme that matches your academic background.
2. Apply for admission: Submit your application through UniversityAdmissions.se. Rank an eligible Dalarna University master's programme as your first choice to qualify for the Choose Dalarna First Scholarship.
3. Submit the required documents: Upload your academic transcripts, degree certificates, English-language evidence and any other documents required for your chosen programme.
4. Complete the scholarship application: Submit the separate online application for the Choose Dalarna First Scholarship through the university's official scholarship page. For the autumn 2027 intake, applications are expected to open in January 2027.
5. Meet the scholarship deadline: Submit the scholarship application by 15 February 2027, as specified for the autumn intake, and ensure your admission application meets the relevant deadline.
6. Wait for the admission decision: Dalarna University will assess your academic eligibility. Applicants who meet the scholarship criteria and are admitted to an eligible master's programme can receive the tuition-fee reduction.
7. Check the scholarship result: Follow the official scholarship page for published results and updates. The scholarship reduction is applied to the first-semester tuition invoice.

Applying for a fully funded alternative

Students interested in the Swedish Institute (SI) Scholarship must first apply for an approved master's programme at Dalarna University and then submit a separate application directly to the Swedish Institute when its application period opens. SI scholarships have different eligibility requirements and may cover tuition fees, living expenses and a travel grant.

Important: The February 2027 deadline applies to Dalarna University's own autumn-intake scholarship. Check the official page for the confirmed 2027 application dates and any updates before submitting your application.

Required Documents

Applicants should prepare the following documents for admission to their chosen master's programme at Dalarna University:

- Bachelor's degree certificate or proof of completed studies.
- Academic transcripts showing courses and grades.
- Proof of English proficiency, if required.
- Passport copy or other identification document, where applicable.
- Additional supporting documents required by the selected programme.
- Scholarship application form submitted separately through the university's official scholarship process.

Document requirements may vary depending on the programme and the applicant's educational background. Check the official instructions before applying.

Is this scholarship fully funded or tuition-only?

The Dalarna University Scholarship is not fully funded. It provides a tuition fee reduction of SEK 5,000 through the Choose Dalarna First Scholarship. It does not cover living expenses, accommodation, or travel costs. Eligible students may separately apply for Swedish Institute scholarships, which can cover tuition fees and living expenses.

Which nationalities and study levels are eligible?

The Dalarna University Master's Scholarships 2027 are open to international students who are required to pay tuition fees in Sweden, including applicants from outside the EU/EEA and Switzerland. Applicants must meet the admission requirements and apply for an eligible master's programme at Dalarna University.

- Eligible nationalities: Students who are required to pay tuition fees, subject to the university's eligibility criteria.
- Study level: Master's degree programmes only, including eligible campus-based and online programmes.
- Not eligible: Bachelor's degrees and standalone courses.

Applicants interested in fully funded Swedish Institute scholarships must check the separate nationality and programme requirements.

Is university admission required before the scholarship application?

Applicants must apply for a master's programme at Dalarna University through UniversityAdmissions.se and rank an eligible Dalarna University programme as their first choice. They must also submit a separate scholarship application by the deadline. Admission is required to receive the scholarship, but applicants can submit the scholarship application before the final admission decision is announced.

What is the exact deadline and timezone?

- The Dalarna University Master's Scholarships 2027 have two important deadlines for the autumn intake:
 - Master's programme application deadline: 15 January 2027.
 - Scholarship application deadline: 15 February 2027.
 - Timezone: The official scholarship page does not specify an exact deadline time or timezone.
